

TAGLIATELLE

Pasta, Missy Robbins

REST

20-30 min at room temperature

DETAILS

- Dough: egg-dough
- Region: Emilia-Romagna and neighboring regions. Called fettuccine in Lazio

METHOD

1. Make an egg-based dough, then roll and sheet it.
2. Give a wooden work surface a light dusting of 00 flour. Line a sheet pan with parchment, then dust the parchment with semolina.
3. Knife the sheets into 12-inch lengths and trim the ragged edges off. Save the trim for soup.
4. Dust each sheet lightly with 00 flour and stack them neatly two or three high. Run a fluted pastry cutter around every edge of the stack so all the edges come out ruffled.
5. Starting at the long edge of the stack, cut 1/2-inch strands working inward. A ruler or straightedge keeps the lines even while you get used to the fluted cutter.
6. Dust the strands generously with 00 flour and shake them apart. Bend the batch into a horseshoe and set it on the pan.
7. Repeat with the rest of the sheets.
8. Dry 20 to 30 minutes at room temperature.
9. To hold, cover the pan with plastic and refrigerate up to 24 hours.

NOTES

Cut width is 1/2 inch, with a fluted pastry cutter.

Bologna's Accademia Italiana della Cucina specifies 1/3 inch. Robbins goes wider on purpose, because her tagliatelle and her fettuccine are rolled to the same thinness and the width is what separates them. Widths vary across the region anyway.

The fluted cutter is Robbins' own distinction for this shape, not a traditional requirement.

Sheets are 12 inches long, stacked two or three high to cut.

Shaped into a horseshoe rather than a nest.

Refrigerated shelf life is 24 hours.

Suits a hearty ragu, or light butter-and-cheese sauces carrying seasonal vegetables such as mushrooms or zucchini.
