YIELD	ACTIVE TIME	REST
filling for 1 large empanada	20 min	30 min to cool

DETAILS

- Cook: not given by the source

INGREDIENTS

quantity not given	Berberechos
quantity not given	Onion
quantity not given	Pepper
quantity not given	Garlic
1 tsp	Sweet pimentón
as needed	Olive oil for sweating
as needed	Salt

METHOD

1. Open the berberechos in a covered pan over high heat with a splash of water. Shell them, strain the liquor and keep it.
2. Finely chop the onion, pepper and garlic.
3. Sweat them gently in the oil until very soft and well reduced, the onion melting, almost confit.
4. Add the pimentón away from intense heat and stir a few seconds so it does not turn bitter.
5. Fold in the berberechos, mix and adjust the salt. Add a little of the liquor if it is dry.
6. Cool completely before assembling.

NOTES

Must be cooled completely before assembly, since a warm filling softens Solla's thin dough.
Drain the berberechos well and go easy on the liquor. It can be reduced separately and added concentrated instead.
The source lists the filling ingredients with no amounts at all. It details the dough, not the grams of filling, so weigh to taste.
The source gives no time for the sofrito either, only that it should end up very soft and well reduced.
Solla picks berberechos because they "encajan a la perfección", and the same base takes carne, atún, pollo or pulpo.
Take your time on the onion. A very well pochada zaragallada is the secret of a Galician empanada.
Pimentón last and off the heat.
