PULLED PORK AND CHORIZO FILLING

INGREDIENTS

500 g	Braise — pork belly, skin removed
1/2 each	Braise — onion, carrot, leek, celery (chopped)
1 bulb	Braise — garlic, halved
5 g	Braise — smoked paprika
2 g	Braise — chilli flakes (habanero)
2 g	Braise — white peppercorns
25 g	Braise — tomato purée
50 ml	Braise — red wine
to cover	Braise — chicken stock mixed with veal stock in a 50:50 ratio
1	Braise — bay leaf
1 sprig	Braise — thyme
3	Braise — coriander stalks
quantity not given	Braise — olive oil
50 g	Final mix — chorizo, diced
quantity not given	Final mix — reduced braising liquid
1 bunch	Final mix — coriander, leaves picked and chopped

METHOD

1. Braise the pork belly at 120 C for 4 hours with stock and the aromatics.
2. Shred the meat.
3. Reduce the braising liquid.
4. Fry the diced chorizo in a hot pan until it caramelises lightly and is cooked through.
5. Mix the shredded pork with the chorizo and the oil left in its pan, the reduced liquid and the chopped coriander leaves.
6. Roll into 50 g balls.

NOTES

Used in Pulled Pork Raviolo, which is sealed between gyoza wrappers rather than fresh pasta sheets.
Two sub-components: a long braise, then a cold mix that binds the shredded meat with its own reduced liquid.
The source lists smoked paprika and habanero chilli flakes among the ingredients but never states at which step they go in. They are grouped with the braise here because that is the only stage the source describes taking aromatics.
No quantity for the reduced braising liquid or the olive oil, and the stock is given only as enough to cover.
After assembly the raviolo is steamed 6 minutes, dropped into an ice bath, then re-steamed 5 minutes to serve, so the filling is heated twice.
The chilli, peanut and sesame sauce is outside this file.
