CROQUETAS DE RABO DE TORO

YIELD	ACTIVE TIME	REST	TOTAL TIME
6 people (~24 croquetas)	10 min	5 h (overnight is better)	50 min (the source splits 10 min of prep from 40 min of cooking)

INGREDIENTS

50 g	Wheat flour
50 g	Butter
750 ml	Whole milk
2 tbsp	Sauce from the rabo de toro
100 g	Rabo de toro, braised and boned
1	Onion (optional)
2	Eggs (for coating)
as needed	Breadcrumbs

METHOD

1. Bone the rabo de toro and chop the meat fine. Sweat the onion if you are using it.
2. Melt the butter, fry the meat briefly, and stir in the flour until it forms a paste.
3. Add the milk gradually, cooking the bechamel about 30 min.
4. Stir in 2 tbsp of the braising sauce. Transfer to a tray and rest in the fridge, 5 h minimum, overnight better.
5. Shape into quenelles and coat in egg and breadcrumbs.
6. Fry in hot olive oil, turning them so they colour evenly.

NOTES

Roux 1:1 (50 g flour : 50 g butter) to 750 ml milk, stated by the source. At 6.7 g of flour per 100 ml of milk this is the loosest mix in the collection, which matches the 30 min cooking time.
Uses up leftover rabo de toro stew, and the braising sauce reinforces the bechamel.
Served plain, with no sauce, so nothing masks the rabo de toro.
Long rest, overnight preferably, to roll them properly.
Not the same recipe as the TATEL rabo croqueta.
Shaped as quenelles rather than rolled balls.
Fried in olive oil, which the source names only in the frying step and never measures.
