CANEDERLI

REGION
Italian Alps, particularly Trentino–Alto Adige

METHOD

1. Line a sheet pan with parchment.
2. Wet your hands lightly and roll the canederli dough into 54 g balls, about golf-ball size. Work in batches. Set them on the pan as you go.
3. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate up to 24 hours.

NOTES

No tool beyond your hands. The defining element is the dough: stale bread rather than a rolled or extruded flour dough. Locally these are called gnocchi di pane, bread gnocchi.
Portion weight is 54 g per ball.
The book's version uses rye bread in place of white.
Known as Knödel across the Austrian and German border. Two traditional variants: canederli di speck, with smoked cured ham, bread, eggs, flour, and chives; and canederli di spinaci, with cheese, spinach, and parsley.
Can be boiled ahead, cooled on a sheet pan, then covered and refrigerated up to 24 hours before serving. Raw formed balls also keep refrigerated up to 24 hours.
Served in sage-and-butter sauce or in brodo.
